A TRIBUTE TO GRASS.

Poetle Eulogy That Was Pronounced

by Senator Ingalls. The following tribute to grass, written by the late Senator Ingalls of Kansus, should be preserved:

"Majestic, fruitful, wondrous plant! The corn triumphant, that with the aid of man hath made victorious procession across the tufted plain and laid foundation for the social excellence that is and is to be. This glorious plant, transmuted by the alchemy of God, sustains the warrior in battle, the poet in song and strengthens everywhere the thousand arms that work the purposes of life.

"Next in importance to the divine profusion of water, light and air, those three great physical facts which render existence possible, may be reckoned the universal beneficence of grass. Exaggerated by tropical heats and vapors to the gigantic cane congested with its saccharine secretion or dwarfed by polar rigors to the fibrous hair of northern solitudes, embracing between these extremes the maize, with its resolute pernons, the rice plant of southern swamps, the wheat, rye, barley, oats and other cereals, no less than the humbler verdure of the hillside, pasture and prairie in the temperate zone, grass is the most widely distributed of all vegetable beings and is at once the type of our life and the emblem of mortality. Lying in the sunshine among the buttercups and the dandellons of May, scarcely higher in intelligence than the minute enants of the mimic wilderness, our earliest recollections are of grass, and when the fitful fever is ended and the foelish wrangle of the market and the forum is closed grass heals over the scar which our descent into the bosom of the earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead.

"Grass is the forgiveness of nature, her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten. Streets abandoned by traffic become grass grown like rura? lanes and obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. Beleaguered by the sullen hosts of winter, it withdraws into the impregnable fortress of its subterranean vitality and emerges upor the first selicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, by wandering birds, propagated by the subtle horticulture of the elements, which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outline of the world. Its tenacious fibers hold the earth in its place and prevent its soluble components from washing into the wasting sea. It invades the solitudes of deserts, climbs the innecessible slopes and forbidding pinnacles of mountains, modifies climates and determines the history, character and destiny of the nations. Unobtrusive and patient, it has immortal vigor and aggression. Banished from the thoroughfare and the field, it bides its time to return, and when vigilance is relaxed or the dynasty has perished it silently resumes the throne from which it has been expelled, but which it never abrogates. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the llly or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air. and yet should its harvest fail for a slugle year famine would depopulate

Animals' Tails, Though most animals possess a tall, either in the full or the incipient stage of growth, few of them use it to the same extent as the kangardo, the scorpion, the horse and the giraffe. What was its destined use? That it was not destined for ornament is shown by the fact that in certain vertebrae it is proved to be an extension of the vertebral column. A satisfactory solution is to be found, I think, in the hypotheals that the tall in animals is nothing else than the taproot of vegetables, which has become obsolete or useless owing to the fact that the living being has long since adopted another method of struggling for existence.—Brooklyn

A Fewerful Writer. The late Rufus E. Shapley, the brilliant Philadelphia lawyer, wrote "Solid For Mulbooly," which had an immense success. Once at a dinner an editor congratulated Mr. Shapley warmly on "Solid For Mulbooly," The editor said it was powerfully written. Mr. Shapley replied: "Yes, I suppose I am a powerful writer. The other day I wrote a letter of condolence to the widow of an old triend, and I undertand that the lady no sooner read my letter than, clanging her black gown to a pink one, she went to a matinee." -Argonaut.

- An absent-minded woman one Sunday morning walked into church, took a front seat and joined in the service vigorously, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Then the collection basket was passed to her, and, putting a coin into it, she looked about. She cast glances in every direction, her mind cleared, and an expression of amazement overspread her face. She got up. She hurried down the aisle. She overtook the man with the collec-tion basket. "I'm in the wrong church," she whispered, and, taking out the coin she had put in, she hurried forth.
